

Seanna Noonan

Artist Statement

My latest artwork delves into the ever-changing appearance of living with vitiligo, a condition that personally affects me. Through abstract shapes, bold lines, and patterns, I explore the mix of emotions that come with pigment loss and body image quirks. My creative process involves swirling, scraping, and layering paint on canvas to express my identity and fuel my creativity. By comparing my experience with vitiligo to others, my work prompts thoughtful reflection on why some of us suffer with the condition while others do not.

Seanna Noonan

Bio

Seanna Noonan is an artist whose work serves as a reflection of her inner world and unique personal style. She utilizes a variety of materials in her creations, such as acrylics, cut-up painted canvas, and twine, to bring her visions to life. In her latest pieces, Seanna delves into the realms of abstract shapes, bold lines, and patterns, all while exploring the experience of living with vitiligo. Through her art, she delves into the complexities of this condition, capturing the mix of emotions that come with pigment loss and navigating body image quirks. Seanna's artistic process involves swirling, scraping, and layering paint on the canvas, allowing her to express her identity and delve into the things that drive her creativity. Her work has found its way into private collections across New York City and beyond, showcasing the widespread appeal of her unique artistic vision. Seanna can often be found at Mana Contemporary in Jersey City, where she dedicates her time to honing her craft and creating new pieces that continue to captivate audiences with their depth and beauty.

Website: www.manacontemporary.com/artists/noonan-seanna/